Greensboro, NC -- Effective December 1, Susie's Law can be used against anyone who abuses an animal. That means an animal cruelty conviction can result in jail time.

Supporters of Susie's Law held a party to celebrate the milestone at the Greene Street Club in Downtown Greensboro. Susie even showed up for the fun.

Susie's former foster mom Roberta Wall said, while they're excited about the law's passage, the fight isn't over. "Its just a start, its not strong enough, but the nice thing about Susie's Law is that it raised awareness and created a voice for our animals in North Carolina so we're celebrating that today too."

Organizers also accepted donations for Susie's Miracle Fund, which pays for medical care for animals at the Guilford County Animal Shelter. One of the dogs helped by money from Susie's Miracle Fund, Bailey, also came to the party.
